

Just Simchas: All Occasions Guide

Introduction: Brit Milah and Simchat Bat

A brit milah or simchat bat is the moment your child becomes part of the wider Jewish community. Celebrations and milestones in a child's life present opportunities to impart Jewish values to the next generation. At the ceremony, parents of the newborn child traditionally utter a prayer that states the importance of Torah and mitzvot in the life ahead of the child. When you celebrate the beginning of a new life in an ethical way, you are making an important statement about the values you want to pass onto your child.

Choose to integrate tzedek as a focus in this life cycle event. The Just Simchas guide is designed to ensure that your simcha can be easily imbued with Torah values of tzedek.

Catering and Food

Since food is a central part of any simcha, choosing a caterer can be one of the most important choices you make when planning your event. In addition to ensuring the caterer is kosher, we urge you to choose one that is yosher (just). Launched by Uri L'Tzedek, the Tav HaYosher is a local grassroots initiative that brings workers, restaurant owners and community members together to create just workplaces in kosher restaurants and catering services. In order to qualify for the Tav HaYosher, a restaurant must provide their workers with the right to fair pay, the right to fair time, and the right to a safe work environment. All criteria are derived strictly from US and Canadian state and local law. Choosing a Tav-certified caterer is an opportunity to harness some of the power and influence that you have as a kosher consumer to strengthen tzedek in our world and create a true kiddush Hashem (sanctification of God's name).

Appendix A is a list of caterers in the United States and Canada that have the Tav HaYosher. If your caterer is not on the list, encourage them to contact Uri L'Tzedek to sign up for certification. The Tav HaYosher is free and easy to obtain.

In addition, leftover food from simchas is frequently thrown out. An easy way to promote tzedek is by donating this food. A list of food banks that accept food donations can be found in Appendix B.

Location

There are many venue options for your simcha. You can use your influence as a consumer to select a location that treats its workers ethically. A central part of the Jewish notion of social justice is ensuring that vulnerable members of society are treated fairly. Today the most vulnerable in society are often those in low-skilled, low-paying jobs. Make tzedek a central part of your celebration by using these guidelines to choose your location.

- Hotel employers often take advantage of their workers by using unfair labor practices. If you are hosting your simcha in a hotel, choose a hotel whose workers are unionized to support labor protection. The New York Hotel Workers Union has a list here of unionized hotels.
- Check to see if the hotel is currently in the midst of labor disputes.
- If you are hosting your simcha in a non-hotel location, we encourage you to call and ask if their workers are unionized.
- You can also consider supporting your local Jewish community by hosting your simcha in a synagogue or local Jewish institution.

Apparel

There is an understandable amount of excitement when selecting the perfect outfit for a simcha. We all want to look wonderful at our celebrations and carefully choosing our outfit allows us to imbue our simchas with a special feeling of uniqueness and beauty. After your celebration is over, please consider donating your outfit to a gemach (Jewish donation agency), so others who may not be able to afford new outfits can also have clothing that will make them feel beautiful at their simchas. You might also consider renting your outfit or buying it pre-worn. This limits waste and benefits the environment.

A list of local gemachs is available in Appendix C.

Kippot

Many people choose to distribute kippot as mementos of their simcha. Choose to leave them with a kippab made from fair trade materials such as those on Fairtradekippot.org or Fairtradejudaica.org.

Decor

Decor can give a great deal of meaning and beauty to a simcha. Add even more meaning by choosing sustainable decorations.

Avoiding Conspicuous Consumption

Social justice can also be incorporated into your decorating plan by using items that can be donated after the event, or using centerpieces that will encourage awareness of and donations to worthy causes. These are great ways of ensuring that your simcha has a lasting effect on the wider community.

Centerpieces

Centerpieces are often thrown out at the end of simchas, creating unnecessary waste. Reduce waste with the following tips:

- Select non-traditional items like books, toys, bottles, diapers or stuffed animals, which can be donated to the children's wing of your local hospital, daycare or adoption agency.
- Use potted plants instead of cut flowers and donate them to a hospital or an old age home. Flower Power Foundation accepts flower donations throughout New York and California.
- Jewish Family Services offers themed centerpieces for simchas. These centerpieces are for rent and can be made out of food or books. The proceeds from renting the centerpieces directly support the corresponding branch of Jewish Family Services' tzedakah services around the country.
- Directly engage with social justice by using beautifully decorated tzedakah boxes as centerpieces. Place the tzedakah box in the center of each table with a note about the charity to which you have chosen and invite guests to add their own contributions.

Uri L'Tzedek Orthodox Social Justice

25 Broadway, 17th Floor, New York, NY 10004 • (212) 284-6540 • www.utzedek.org • info@utzedek.org

- Inspire social justice centered conversation by leaving a small card explaining your creative centerpiece and where it will be donated after the conclusion of the simcha. This can help encourage your friends and family to make similar arrangements at their celebrations, spreading your commitment to social justice to those you love most.

Invitations

Invitations are one of the easiest and most effective places to limit your ecological impact. Many people turn to online invitations, such as Paperless Post, which are more customizable (offering graphics, photographs, etc.), cheaper and more ecologically friendly. When using physical invitations, consider using recycled paper and soy-based ink. There are many online resources including a list of eco-friendly invitation vendors here.

Gifts

Since a simcha reflects your Jewish values of tzedek and chesed, ask your guests to give gifts that promote these values. Use the following suggestions to make all parts of your simcha as socially responsible as possible.

- Ask for donations to a tzedakah instead of gifts. Appendix E is a list of Tzedakot that work to create tzedek and transform our communities.
- An organization like Baby Buggy, which donates new or gently used essentials for parents of young children, is a great way to introduce tzedek into your celebration of a new child.
- Ask for gifts that are fair trade or otherwise ethically produced.
- Kiva is the world's first person-to-person micro-lending website. Encourage your guests to invest in micro-finance through an organization like KIVA or Red Heifer to help entrepreneurs in the developing world as a gift to you. A list of other micro-finance organizations can be found on the Forbes website.

Introduction: Bar and Bat Mitzvah Guide

A bar or bat mitzvah is a milestone event marking the beginning of Jewish adulthood. In this ceremony, Jewish children take on the obligations and responsibilities of Jewish life. Our tradition teaches that while none of us is responsible for all the world's ills, we are still obligated to help in whatever way we can. As a bar or bat mitzvah, your child can participate in this tradition by creating a simcha which reflects the values of tzedek and chesed. Just Simchas enables your child to promote justice through action at his or her simcha.

Choose to make tzedek part of one of the most important moments in a young adult's life. The Just Simchas guide is designed to ensure that your simcha can be easily imbued with the Torah value of tzedek.

Bar and Bat Mitzvah Projects

A traditional bar or bat mitzvah project focuses on chesed or tzedek. Here are some ideas for simple, fun activities and projects (to be done either at the celebration or before), which make a significant impact, both on the person participating and the world around us. These projects teach your child and his or her friends the importance of tzedakah and social justice.

- Zichron Chana Baila sends care packages to hospitalized children. Creating and decorating these care packages at a bar or bat mitzvah is a fun way to teach children about the importance of caring for others.
- Action for Post-Soviet Jewry assists Jewish communities in the former Soviet Union. Its main project is Adopt-a-Bubbe which sends food packages to impoverished elderly Jews living in Eastern Europe. Donations as part of bar and bat mitzvah projects can help fund these food deliveries. Post-Soviet Jewry also provides aid for students at Jewish day schools and Jewish orphanages, which is attached to a bar/bat mitzvah "twinning" program that links young Jews in America with their counterpart in Ukraine, usually a Jewish day school student. Guests at your simcha can write letters to their Ukrainian Jewish counterparts and possibly begin a pen pal exchange.

- AJWS partnered with an organization called “The Girl Effect” to support 16 organizations throughout Ethiopia, Kenya and India that create safe spaces for adolescent girls to grow and flourish, and become change-makers within their communities. Screen a “Girl Effect” movie at your daughter’s bat mitzvah to raise money and awareness for this important program.
- Holding a donation drive for items that have a special significance to your child. For example, one bar mitzvah child collected gently used and new instruments that his music school helped him repair and donate to public schools that needed them in his area.
- Consider a resource like Allchased.org, which has examples of organizations with which bar, and bat mitzvahs have teamed up in the past, including: Share Your Soles, The Make-A-Wish Foundation and Boys Town Jerusalem.
- Leket Israel, an organization dedicated to ending hunger in Israel is another resource for bnei mitzvah. Many of their projects are specifically set up as bar or bat mitzvah projects.

Decor

Decor can give a great deal of meaning and beauty to a simcha. Add even more meaning by choosing sustainable decorations.

Avoiding Conspicuous Consumption

Social justice can also be incorporated into your decorating plan by using items that can be donated after the event, or using centerpieces that will encourage awareness of and donations to worthy causes. These are great ways of ensuring that your simcha has a lasting effect on the wider community.

Centerpieces

Centerpieces are often thrown out at the end of simchas, creating unnecessary waste. Reduce waste with the following tips:

- Centerpieces can be made out of school supplies. These supplies can then be donated to a local school or an organization like Harlem Children’s Zone (<http://www.hcz.org/home>), which tackles poverty and illiteracy among children in New York.

This can help encourage your friends and family to make similar arrangements at their celebrations, spreading your commitment to social justice to those you love most.

Mechitzas

Consider adapting one of our centerpiece suggestions above for your mechitza. A row of trees can serve as an elegant division between men and women's sections during the dancing. You can plant them after the simcha to ensure that the social justice element of your celebration lives on.

Invitations

Invitations are one of the easiest and most effective places to limit your ecological impact. Since a simcha reflects your Jewish values of tzedek and chesed, ask your guests to give gifts that promote these values. Use the following suggestions to make all parts of your simcha as socially responsible as possible.

- Ask for donations to a tzedekah instead of gifts. The Tzedekah should resonate with your child's interests and values. Use the same organization for the bar/bat mitzva project and your child's chosen tzedekah for additional synergy. Appendix E is a list of Tzedekot that work to create tzedek and transform our communities.

Introduction: Weddings Guide

A wedding is a time of ultimate personal simcha. But even at the height of our own personal joy, we traditionally recall the destruction of Jerusalem and the wider injustices in the world. No personal simcha can be complete while there is still suffering surrounding us.

Choose to make tzedek a part of one of the most important moments in your life. By making these conscious choices toward a moral simcha, we strengthen both the community and the individual. The Just Simchas guide is designed to ensure that your simcha can be easily imbued with the Torah value of tzedek.

Catering and Food

Since food is a central part of any simcha, choosing a caterer can be one of the most important choices you make when planning your event. In addition to ensuring the caterer is kosher, we urge you to choose one that is yosher (just). Launched by Uri L'Tzedek, the Tav HaYosher is a local grassroots initiative that brings workers, restaurant owners and community members together to create just workplaces in kosher restaurants and catering services. In order to qualify for the Tav HaYosher, a restaurant must provide their workers with the right to fair pay, the right to fair time, and the right to a safe work environment. All criteria are derived strictly from US and Canadian state and local law. Choosing a Tav-certified caterer is an opportunity to harness some of the power and influence that you have as a kosher consumer to strengthen tzedek in our world and create a true kiddush Hashem (sanctification of God's name).

- If you are hosting your simcha in a non-hotel location, we encourage you to call and ask if their workers are unionized.
- You can also consider supporting your local Jewish community by hosting your simcha in a synagogue or local Jewish institution.

Jewelry and Conflict Diamonds

When purchasing an engagement or wedding ring it is important to consider where and how the precious metals and stones are mined. Mining is considered one of the most brutal industries both in terms of human rights abuses and ecological impact. Ensuring that your jewelry is ‘conflict free’ means you are not supporting resource-financed conflict and that you are actively supporting the local economies in the countries of origin. Educate yourself about the Jewish obligation as buyers to support a just system and not be complicit in corrupt ones by reading Uri L’Tzedek’s source sheet on conflict diamonds. Resources for buying conflict-free precious metals can be found in Appendix D.

Decor

Decor can give a great deal of meaning and beauty to a simcha. Add even more meaning by choosing sustainable decorations.

Avoiding Conspicuous Consumption

Social justice can also be incorporated into your decorating plan by using items that can be donated after the event, or using centerpieces that will encourage awareness of and donations to worthy causes. These are great ways of ensuring that your simcha has a lasting effect on the wider community.

Centerpieces

Centerpieces are often thrown out at the end of simchas, creating unnecessary waste. Reduce waste with the following tips:

- Select non-traditional items like books or non-perishable food packages. Choose items that are relevant to a charitable cause of your choosing and donate them at the end of the simcha.
- Jewish Family Services offers themed centerpieces for simchas. These centerpieces are for rent and can be made out of food or books. The proceeds from renting the centerpieces directly support the corresponding branch of Jewish Family Services' tzedekah services around the country.
- Directly engage with social justice by using beautifully decorated tzedakah boxes as centerpieces. Place the tzedakah box in the center of each table with a note about the charity to which you have chosen and invite guests to add their own contributions.
- Inspire social justice centered conversation by leaving a small card explaining your creative centerpiece and where it will be donated at the conclusion of the simcha. This can help encourage your friends and family to make similar arrangements at their celebrations, spreading your commitment to social justice to those you love most.

One more thing to keep in mind is that Do-It-Yourself can be a great resource for a wedding. Since it is entirely customizable you can make your simcha look exactly how you want and the time that you invested will only add to the pride that you'll feel. If you don't feel like you have the time to do this on your own, make it an event. Turn an evening with friends into a creative session. They will feel honored to be a part of your wedding and you will have the ability to make your simcha to be a Just Simcha.

Mechitzas

Consider adapting one of our centerpiece suggestions above for your mechitza. A row of trees can serve as an elegant division between men and women's sections during the dancing. You can plant them after the simcha to ensure that the social justice element of your celebration lives on.

Invitations

Invitations are one of the easiest and most effective places to limit your ecological impact. Many people turn to online invitations, such as Paperless Post, which are more customizable (offering graphics, photographs, etc.), cheaper and more ecologically friendly. When using physical invitations, consider using recycled paper and soy-based ink. There are many online resources including Great Green Wedding, which provides a database of companies offering "green" wedding invitations.

Outfits

We understand the excitement that goes into picking the perfect outfit for a simcha. We all want to look good at our celebrations, and picking our outfits carefully allows us to imbue our simchas with a special feeling of uniqueness and beauty. After your celebration is over, please consider donating your outfit to a gemach (donation agency), so others who may not be able to afford new outfits can also have clothing that will make them feel beautiful at their simchas. This way, your simcha will promote social justice long after it is over. You might also consider renting your outfit or buying it pre-worn. This limits waste and benefits the environment.

A list of gemachs is available in Appendix C.

Wedding Dresses

For most people, a wedding dress is worn only once, after which it is destined to hang in a closet, untouched for decades. Consider donating your wedding dress to a gemach so it can be worn many times--and that another bride gets to feel just as beautiful at her wedding as you did on your special day. Alternatively, renting your dress or outfit from a gemach or eco-friendly vendor like Green Bride Guide also limits waste.

Kippot

Many people choose to distribute kippot as mementos of their simcha. Choose to leave them with a kippah made from fair trade materials such as those on Fairtradekipot.org or Fairtradejudaica.org.

Gifts

Since a simcha reflects your Jewish values of tzedek and chesed, ask your guests to give gifts that promote these values. Use the following suggestions to make all parts of your simcha as socially responsible as possible.

- Ask for donations to a tzedakah instead of gifts. Appendix E is a list of Tzedakot that work to create tzedek and transform our communities.
- A charity registry like the I Do Foundation is set up just like a gift registry and allows your friends and family to view and donate to your desired charities.
- Ask for gifts that are fair trade or otherwise ethically produced.
- Kiva is the world's first person-to-person micro-lending website. Encourage your guests to invest in micro-finance through an organization like KIVA or Red Heifer to help entrepreneurs in the developing world as a gift to you. Appendix B: Food Banks

Donating leftover food from your simcha prevents waste and fulfills the mitzvah to help feed those in need.

Food banks generally accept prepared catered food as long as:

1. It was kept refrigerated.
2. It never left the kitchen
3. It is properly packaged.
4. It is not more than a couple of days old.

The following is a list of food banks that accept food from catered celebrations. For a more detailed list of food banks please visit Food Bank NYC or Feeding America.

Appendix C: Gemachs

After your celebration is over, please consider donating your outfit to a gemach (Jewish donation agency), so others who may not be able to afford new outfits can also have clothing that will make them feel beautiful at their simchas.

Please note that many gemachim choose to remain anonymous and have listed only phone numbers and not names. Gemachim often close or move when the organizer moves. We have done our best to ensure correct and current information. Please let us know if any of these numbers no longer work.

Appendix D: Resources for Conflict-Free Precious Metals

When purchasing an engagement or wedding ring it is important to consider where and how the precious metals and stones are mined. Mining is considered one of the most brutal industries both in terms of human rights abuses and ecological impact.

Jewish texts urge us, as buyers, to support a just system and not be complicit in corrupt ones. Ensuring that your jewelry is 'conflict free' means you are not supporting resource-financed conflict and you are actively supporting the local economies in the countries of origin.

Below is a list of four jewelers committed to producing beautiful and ethical engagement and wedding rings.

- Fifi Bijoux is a British luxury brand launched in 2006. Fifi Bijoux designs Ethical Engagement Rings, Ethical Wedding Rings and collections of Designer Ethical Jewelry.
- The CRED Foundation, a charity campaigning on Education, Poverty and Human Rights issues, created Cred Jewelry in 1996 to promote ethical and beautiful jewelry. CRED are the pioneering Fair trade and Fair mined retail jeweler in Europe. So not only are their pieces designed to look wonderful, but every sale helps build a new life for the communities that provide them with the raw materials.
- MADE UK is a fair-trade accessories brand that produces jewelry and leather goods in their Nairobi workshop in Kenya. First and foremost they are a fashion brand, but we are also committed to supporting and promoting trade in Africa.
- Brilliant Earth was founded in 2005. Their goal is to make jewelry as beautiful as it can be. They are passionate about cultivating a more ethical, transparent, and sustainable jewelry industry.

Appendix E: Tzedakah

Your simcha should reflect your Jewish values of tzedek and chesed. There are many ways you can give tzedakah at your simcha (asking for donations to a tzedakah instead of gifts, using beautifully decorated tzedakah boxes as centerpieces etc.). Below is a list of organizations that work to create tzedek and transform our communities.

Organization (Click to donate)	Description
Uri L'Tzedek	Uri L'Tzedek is an Orthodox social justice organization guided by Torah values and dedicated to combating suffering and oppression. Through community based education, leadership development and action, Uri L'Tzedek creates discourse, inspires leaders, and empowers the Jewish community towards creating a more just world.

Natan	Natan believes that educated, engaged, and entrepreneurial philanthropy can transform both givers and nonprofit organizations. Through unique educational events and experiences, and through a rigorous, hands-on grant making process, Natan is creating an influential, philanthropically minded community of young Jews dedicated to transforming the Jewish future.
Repair the World	Repair the World focuses on mobilizing Jews of all ages and backgrounds to serve with integrity and authenticity, ensuring that we leave the world a better place. They work to develop high-quality service opportunities with real impact and build an inspired Jewish community engaged in service.
UJA Federation of New York	The UJA enables Jews to overcome crises, cope with the struggles of everyday life, and achieve self-sufficiency. They help those living in poverty, the aging, Holocaust survivors, children and adults with disabilities and special needs, and the unemployment across the economic spectrum. UJA also provides access to crucial human services to all New Yorkers, whoever they are, and Jews everywhere.
Jewish Federations of North America (JFNA)	The Jewish Federations of North America (JFNA) represents 155 Jewish Federations & over 300 independent Jewish communities. The Federation movement protects and enhances the well-being of Jews worldwide through the values of tikkun olam (repairing the world), tzedakah (charity and social justice) and Torah (Jewish learning). They do this through a multitude of programs including the NWP (National Women's Philanthropy) and NextGenJews (Young Jewish Leaders).
American Jewish World Service (AJWS)	Inspired by Judaism's commitment to justice, American Jewish World Service works to realize human rights and end poverty in the developing world. They empower over 400 grassroots organizations to work in their own communities for economic and social justice, human dignity and sustainable growth and change.
Camp Simcha	Through programs that address the emotional, social, and financial needs of seriously ill children, their families, and communities, Chai Lifeline restores normalcy to family life, and better enables families to withstand the crises and challenges of serious pediatric illness.
Hazon	Hazon programs are multi-generational and give entry points for Jews of all backgrounds who are concerned about the environment and the world. They also serve a national and international population; members of every denomination and those who are unaffiliated; intergenerational from children to seniors – including families and singles, with a particular focus on young adults interested in developing the skills to take on leadership roles in their communities and make a difference in the world.

Masbia	Masbia is a nonprofit soup kitchen network and food pantry, providing hot, nutritious meals daily for hundreds of New Yorkers in desperate need of food, and every week handing out hundreds of weekend take-home packages of groceries. In 2009, Masbia expanded from one kitchen and dining hall in Brooklyn’s Boro Park, to a four-kitchen network throughout Brooklyn and Queens.
Bend the Arc	Bend the Arc’s mission is to connect Jews who want to make a difference with the tools they need to do so, working collaboratively across lines of race and faith with people and communities throughout the United States to create economic opportunity and secure basic rights.
